

Valley Clouds

Babbling mountain stream waters
Listened to cries of thirst
From high mountain fauna.

Rolling over sun-warmed rocks,
Energized stream water
Lost interest in journeying seaward.

Up-drifting air currents
Offered gently rising transportation,
An alternative to a rock bouncing descent.

Water friends reconvened
In the spaces between the heated air
Creating a white wisp over river gouged mountain valleys.

Rising ever higher,
Water droplets cooled in Northern air and
Condensed to rain on the tree covered hills.

On an eco-system holiday
Air and water floated over swaying treetops
Giving parched peaks a refreshing drink.

F. Nelson Stover
Celo, NC
October 2001